A large number of the ladies in town gathered at the residence of Mrs. W. G. Liesemef on Saturday last to tender a farewell and handkerchief shower to Mrs. W.
L. Martin, who is leaving Didsbury and making her home at Red Deer. A very pleasant social time was spent which was only marred by the thought of Mrs. Martin's departure.

The services in the Evangelical church for next Sunday will be conducted by Rev. L. H. Wagner, Supt. of Missions. They will be as follows: German in the morning at 10.30; English at 3 p.
m. at which the Lord's Supper will be celebrated. Service again at 7.30 p.m. Preparatory service on Saturday at 2.30 followed by he is recovering, however, and it is hoped he will soon be around again.

Mr. Whiting and son from Nebraska have been visiting Fisher Bros. and are very pleased with this section of the country.

Crops in Didsbury District

The season is now so far advanced that the crop situation in this district can be spoken of with some degree of certainty, although there is still a chance that some untoward incident in the shape of hail or frost may do considerable damage yet before the grain is cut.

The outlook for one of the best crops that this district has ever had is certainly A1. While there will not be as much straw as in former years the strength of growth has gone where it is most needed, and consequently the grain will be plumper and heavier than for a good many years.

Barley cutting has been under way here for some time and a great many fields of oats have been cut. Wheat is almost ready, and with a few days more of the splendid summer weather we have been experiencing this summer should be ready earlier this year than for two or three previous years.

However, there is one big noticable difference now than formerly in this district. The farmer is not depending so much on the crops because he has realized that there is no better mixed farming country in the whole of Canada than right here, and consequently he is making ends meet and providing himself with a sure means of quicker and better monetary returns in supplying the big markets with hogs, cattle, milk, cream and eggs; something for which the demand is great and continuous and for which good prices are being realized. This district has shipped out more hogs, cattle, milk and cream, for which the farmer receives cash, than almost any other shipping point in Alberta, consequently we have not felt the strain of the money stringency as bad as in other parts of the world and the crop is going to be to the good with a great many of our thrifty farmers.

Gull Lake Property for Sale

I have 240 acres of splendid land close to the shores of Gull Lake for sale in 5 and 10 acre plots at $20 per acre. This property is bound to increase in value as Gull Lake is fast becoming known as one of the best summer resorts in Sunny Alberta. The land is only about 300 yards from the lake shore, and no mistake can be made in investment at present prices. Owner is anxious to close this estate and present terms of $10 deposit with Union Bank, Lacombe, are good till August 20th, when, if purchaser is not satisfied deposit will be returned in full. Balance of payments can be arranged. For further particulars apply to J. Raim, Lacombe or Didsbury.

Sir Richard smiled one of those smiles which have less joy in them than many a sigh.

I'm afraid that nothing short of a doctor's certificate would be sufficient to justify absence to-night.

They ate their breakfast in silence each busy with his and her own thoughts. At its conclusion, Maud said—

Cannot you send a telegram?

To whom?

To Mr. Murgatroyd.

I don't exactly like to do so. It was one of the stipulations at the outset, that I should not appear in the matter. He may be landed in some imbroglio. Telegrams are among the most dangerous and damaging impediments of our present advanced stage of life.

Nevertheless, as the morning wore on, Sir Richard decided to risk it. He worded the telegram indefinitely.

Shall be glad to hear arrival in London. Wire—Hanley.

The telegram was sent to the Falcon. An hour passed; there was no answer. Hanley walked his room restlessly impatient. A second hour dragged its slow length away. Still no reply. Then he determined to wire to the landlord of the Falcon at Tormouth.

Is Mr. Murgatroyd staying at the hotel? The answer was repaid. The reply was prompt enough this time.

Mr. Murgatroyd left early this morning. He was no nearer the solution of his difficulty.

After lunch—a meal on that day to both father and daughter in name only—he ordered his horse. Maud wished to accompany him, but the statesman preferred solitude.

Maud spent the afternoon in her private boudoir, in which she had received Murgatroyd on the night he brought her watch back. The work she had in her fingers was not exacting. There was ample opportunity for thought. Much of it went to Murgatroyd, who had captivated her fancy, and to whom the last fortnight had lent a halo of additional interest. She could hardly be said to be in love with him. She was stirred to intense interest; and that sort of interest between a beautiful girl and a handsome man in the maturity of his mental and physical vigor is capable of becoming something deeper—given a season.

As the day darkened and the lamps were lighted, Maud had a curious sensation of feeling. The wave of doubt disappeared; the tension of anxiety was removed. Her father came in to tea with a haggard face. Maud met him with a cheerfulness which was not feigned.

Something tells me, dad it is all right. You will come out triumphant, as you always have done; and this time will be only an ugly dream. I know it; I feel it.

I wish I could too.

Nevertheless he took his tea more brightly, and afterwards talked on other subjects, especially Maud's presentation by the Duchess of Shropshire on the following Thursday. Although her dress was ready, and in the house, he had not seen it.

Should she go and put it on? Her father pinched her cheek.

I'm afraid I shall not prove a sound critic, but—I should like to see you.

So Maud went.

When she returned he could hardly believe his eyes.

Why, little girl, you do look—stunning. There! there's no other word for it. What a lot of admiration you will get! The daughter of poor Sir Richard Hanley, he added grimly.

They won't say that, said Maud. Then, after a pause, I am not so sure of the admiration—and she thought of Murgatroyd.

I wish the first was as certain to be right as the second to be wrong of our guesses.

When Sir Richard dressed for dinner his valet thought him more cheerful than he had been for days.

As he stepped into his brougham he bought the last edition of the Pioneer. It was just the flipp he wanted.

Why, Murgatroyd might have written or inspired it himself.

And he was nearly the mark than he knew.

CHAPTER XI.

Run to Earth

At twenty minutes past nine there was a sharp knock at No. 34, in the Tavistock Hotel. It was the private sitting-room occupied by Mr. Muller, who was having his after-dinner cigar, with a mug of Leoville, a favorite claret of his, by his side. He had barely time to say: Come in, expecting to see the waiter, when Murray Murgatroyd entered.

Muller glanced at the new-comer with his strong keen gaze, and then flinging the cigar into the fire, half-smoked, sprang to his feet. For a heavy man Muller was singularly agile.

He read in the face of the journalist that a fence was about to begin without any buttons on the fobs.

The two men stood facing one another, half a dozen paces apart, with only the corner of the table between them. They were not ill-matched in height and breadth of shoulders, but Muller carried more flesh, and was the older man by an appreciable number of years. Intellectually, they were both singularly capable antagonists.

Muller was the first to speak.

This is an intrusion, sir; an unwarrantable intrusion. If you have come again about those papers, my answer is the same as before. I have not changed one whit. You shan't have them, sir; more than that, if you do not quit this room, a private room, the proprietor of this hotel ventures to call it, instantly, I will have you turned out; and Muller advanced a step as if about to put the threat into personal application immediately.

Meantime Murgatroyd's quick eye had been taking in the apartment. His principal apprehension all along had been lest Muller had deposited the papers and the incriminating plans and maps elsewhere during that evening. He did not fear the result if the documents had not been put beyond his reach. Murgatroyd's eye lightened when he saw on a little table in the window a small dispatch box, which had evidently been recently taken out of the portmanteau; for by its side was a travelling writing-case. On the dispatch box was clearly written to a perceptive imagination: Private documents, inquire within. Murgatroyd fully meant to inquire within. The proof was all the clearer to his mind by the fact that when Muller spoke of papers his glance involuntarily rested for a second on the dispatch box, which was at right angles, about an equal distance from each of them.

I shall not go, said Murgatroyd, until I have said what I have to say. Neither will you turn me out even of your private room. His tones were quiet, but very determined. He laid a half-sarcastic emphasis on the last two words.

We will see about that, exclaimed Muller, taking a pace backwards towards the bell, which was an electric button on one side of the fire-place. He kept his eyes on Murgatroyd, although turning half from him.

I think you had better hear me out. A touch of that bell will not bring the person you expect, but some one quite different, whom you do not expect.

Muller paused! There was something in the other's tone which convinced him in spite of himself.

I do not understand you, sir. You have forced yourself into my private room; I order you to go out; I don't want you; I have heard what you have to say before. Once for all, I hate you and your country.

I am quite aware of that, interposed Murgatroyd, with still more sarcastic infection of the voice.

If you do not go out of the room, I will have you chucked out of the hotel. If no one else does, I will do it myself.

I don't think you will—not if you are wise.

What is the meaning of this bluster? If I ring this bell, of course the servant who attends to this room will come.

On the contrary. Who else should, pray? You seem to have a powerful imagination—most journalists have, I believe.

I am not imagining now. Muller flung out an oath. He had flushed fiery red to his temples, the color showing wine-deep through his blonde skin.

Say what you mean, sir, and have done with it. Who would come, pray?

A gentleman who ought to be standing here in my stead, if I were not—for reasons of my own, I confess, not connected with philanthropy, or even love of you—so lenient towards you.

Muller strode forward, until the two men were within arm's length of one another.

Murgatroyd did not give an inch. Muller glared at him, but he took no notice, only showing by the firm set of his mouth, and the hard look of his eyes, that the tension of his self-command was great.

You really give yourself away too easily. You might so easily have made me think it was special regard for myself which clothed you with this rare clemency. Perhaps after this long introduction you will condescend to enlighten me a little more.

First, as to your object in coming here uninvited, and certainly unwanted; secondly, as to this mysterious individual, who seems remarkably like thunder, alarming to the uninitiated, but not dangerous. All this mystery would be highly interesting in a novel, but seems a trifle out of place in real life.

Etymological Dispute
 A cheffonyear is a sort of burtau. Tain't nothin' of the kind. It's a man what drives an auto.

If you were as strong, proportionately, as the beetle is, and were a man weighing a couple of hundred pounds, you would be able to lift with ease 400,000 pounds. For a beetle can lift a weight that is just 200 times its own weight.

Or if you could jump about with the same ease as the grasshopper you could spring over the tallest building in the Chicago loop district without much effort.

Or, again, if you wanted to be nearly as strong as the bee you would have to drag after you a load weighing 4,000 pounds.

It seems, apparently, from such observations made by naturalists that the greater in size the animal the greater is the muscular energy needed to move it about, and that there is not much left for outside force.

PANTRY CLEANED
 A Way Some People Have

A doctor said:
 "Before marriage my wife observed in summer and country homes, coming in touch with families of varied means, culture, tastes and discriminating tendencies, that the families using Postum seemed to average better than those using tea or coffee."

"When we were married two years ago, Postum was among our first order of groceries. We also put in some tea and coffee for guests, but after both had stood around the pantry about a year untouched, they were thrown away, and Postum used only."

"Up to the age of 28 I had been accustomed to drink coffee as a routine habit and suffered constantly from indigestion and all its relative disorders."

Tea is just as harmful because it contains caffeine, the same drug found in coffee.

"Since using Postum all the old complaints have completely left me and I sometimes wonder if I ever had them."

Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont. Write for booklet, "The Road to Wellville."

Postum comes in two forms. Regular (must be boiled).

Instant Postum doesn't require boiling but is prepared instantly by stirring a level teaspoonful in an ordinary cup of hot water, which makes it right for most persons.

A big cup requires more and some people who like strong things put in a heaping spoonful and temper it with a large supply of cream.

Experiment until you know the amount that pleases your palate and have it served that way in the future.

Miss Mary Thearin is apparently the oldest unmarried woman in all the world. She lives in Denver, Colo., and not long ago celebrated her 101st birthday.

Really she is a most wonderful woman, according to the reports of her friends and relations. She claims never to have been sick a day in her life, and furthermore, having lived in single bliss all her life, vigorously insists that she never regretted it.

Evidently she is of the opinion that unmarried women are just as happy as married ones—that, in fact the unattached women are likely to get a great deal more out of life, for they are not as apt to spend their days bound down to domestic duties and labors.

Miss Thearin is still perfectly healthy and expects to continue so to enjoy a number of more years in the same cheerful state.

A Remedy for Bilious Headache.—To those subject to bilious headache, Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are recommended as the way to speedy relief. Taken according to directions they will subdue irregularities of the stomach and so act upon the nerves and blood vessels that the pains in the head will cease. There are few who are not at sometime subject to biliousness and familiar with its attendant evils. Yet none need suffer with these pills at hand.

How to Save Your Tires
 A tire manufacturing company gives this advice about the care of motor car tires:

The idea seems universal among motor car owners that the tire cost of their equipment far exceeds all other costs that they have to deal with. It is true that the tire cost must necessarily be greater than any other cost of running connected with the machine but is far from necessary that the cost shall bear such a ratio to the other expenses as is generally the case today.

This is especially true where pneumatic tires are used. If tires were loaded only to the maximum loads for which they were designed, if they were kept inflated always to the pressure called for by the tire manufacturer, if they were not run in ruts, if they were properly and quickly repaired when damaged, and if they were run on wheels which did not wobble, their cost of upkeep would be cut in half.

A man sent his neighbor's little boy to the drug store to buy five postage stamps. He handed him two dimes, the extra one being for himself. Some time afterward the boy came back blubbering and said he had lost one of the dimes.

Because mister, replied the boy, it was your dime I lost.

Woman Is As Old As She Looks

No woman wants to look old. Many in their effort to look youthful resort to the "beauty doctor's" prescriptions. Their mistake is that they visit the wrong department in the drug store. Beauty depends upon health.

Worry, sleepless nights, headaches, pains, disorders, irregularities and weaknesses of a distinctly feminine character in a short time bring the full eye, the "crow's foot," the haggard look, drooping shoulders, and the falling hair.

To retain the appearance of youth you must retain health. Instead of lotions, powders and paints, ask your druggist for

HAIR CAME OUT IN HANDFULS

Scalp in Very Bad Condition. Dandruff Could be Seen Plainly. Lost Most of Hair. Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment Cured.

42 Lippincott St., Toronto, Ontario.—"About a year ago I had a very bad attack of typhoid and my scalp was in a very bad condition. The dandruff could be seen plainly and I lost most of my hair. My hair fell out gradually, but after having it shampooed it came out in handfuls. I used Cuticura Soap to shampoo my hair, then rubbed the Cuticura Ointment into the scalp. The dandruff was very soon removed and my hair stopped falling out. Cuticura Soap and Ointment cured me." (Signed) Miss E. Chamberlaine, Mar. 31, 1912.

HANDS COVERED WITH ECZEMA

Anso du Cap, Quebec.—"About one year ago my daughter had her hands covered with eczema. It broke out in a rash. She was unable to put her hands in water and she used to scratch them until they were red and inflamed and cracked and used to bleed. She was unable to sleep by spells from the pain and burning. We tried several remedies without receiving any relief. After she began washing with Cuticura Soap and applying Cuticura Ointment she got relief at once and after ten days' treatment was entirely cured."

"My baby when teething, broke out with pimples on her face. After three days' treatment of Cuticura Soap she was cured." (Signed) Mad. D. Ombure, Feb. 12, 1912.

A Post-Impression

George Luks, whose paintings of children and old people made a recent sensation in a Fifth Avenue gallery, was talking about the post-impressionists.

But Luks, said a magazine editor, what is a post-impressionist?

With a jolly laugh, Mr. Luks replied: A post-impressionist, my dear fellow, is an artist who aims to give you the post-impression that he has orders for more pictures than he can paint.

Interesting People

Of King Nicholas of Montenegro somebody writes that he stops people to examine their guns and pistols, and rates anybody who carries them unloaded—which recalls an anecdote related of himself by Count Moltke, when, in 1856, he accompanied the crown prince of Prussia to Moscow to attend the coronation of Alexander II. At a ball in the Kremlin Moltke was introduced to a group of picturesque potentates from central Asia, with their girdles stuck full of daggers and pistols, in the present day Albanian manner and he begged to know whether these firearms of theirs were loaded. Why should I carry them if they were not loaded, replied the spokesman of the party; and in a letter to his English wife Moltke confessed that he had never experienced such a set back all his life. Here at last, he said, I have found 'un homme sérieux,' a man who is what he looks and means what he says.

All along the road to Lexington from Cambridge, Mass., there are monuments to rebel colonists who slew British soldiers on April 19, 1775, but the most striking is that which is raised to the memory of Samuel Whittemore. He was 80 years of age at the time and he killed three British soldiers with his own hand. The stone records that for this he received punishment of three kinds. He was shot, he was bayoneted and he was beaten. He was then reasonably enough left for dead. The old fellow must have had a magnificent constitution and a spirit which the most devoted optimist must envy. For the inscription goes on to say that he recovered and lived to the age of 98.

Mr. Roosevelt's successful count of his glasses to win his libel action contrasts present customs with those of England 80 years ago. G. W. E. Russell recounts: Mr. Gladstone, conspicuous from his Oxford days for his moderation in the use of wine, told me that until Sir Andrew Clark limited him on grounds of health to a certain number of glasses he had never thought of counting them. One drank what was put in one's glass without counting or questioning.

His Bequest

One of the briefest and queerest wills on record is that of an old western farmer, who though reputed to be rich, died penniless. His will ran: In the name of God, amen. There's only one thing I leave, I leave the earth. My relations have always wanted that. They can have it.

Blankets of Bark

They have trees for blankets in Ecuador, and they like them, too. They are fond of the firm touch of the bark against them as they sleep.

We would probably think they were 'zero in covering,' and we would doubtless work up in a much befuddled condition if we slept under a wood covering.

But the native Indians are most enthusiastic, according to J. Jameson, a traveller and lecturer, who has recently returned from those parts.

The blankets are made from the bark of a tree which is cut particularly thin. It is pounded and moistened and then pounded some more and put out into the sun to dry. And a most desirable and economical blanket it is, lasting anywhere from two to five years.

Armed with guns and huge game-bags, the two Irishmen sallied forth in search of sport. It was their first venture at shooting, and they were dreadfully keen.

Suddenly Casey spotted a bird and taking aim, prepared to fire the fatal shot. Then Pat seized him by the arm frantically. For mercy's sake don't fire, Casey! he yelled. Sure, an' ye have forgotten to load yer gun! That's as may be, my lad, retorted Casey, but fire I must. Begorra, the bird won't wait.

A huntsman called on Hodge to settle for damages done by a run to hounds and found only Mrs. Hodge at home.

Has your husband, he inquired, made an examination yet?

That he have, sir, replied Mrs. Hodge, with a curtsy.

Rather a cursory examination. I suspect?

Oh, dreadful, sir. Such langwidge I never heard—never.

Between the woman who wants a husband and the woman who wants to get rid of one society in many a town is kept amused and interested.

WHEN AN AIRMAN SHOULD QUIT

Once the Nerve is Gone a Man Should Fly no More

He who flies constantly must look to one personal risk, which may vary according to the characteristics of the individual. This is the danger a man may incur by becoming a little careless while in the air. There is the possibility, in fact, that familiarity may breed—not actual contempt—but a temporary relaxation of vigilance, and piloting an aeroplane needs such watchfulness, such minute precision, that any stances on the part of the man at the wheel, or lever, represents a peril that is very real.

The pilot who flies a great deal should remind himself constantly that there is no room for error in the handling of aircraft.

A loss of confidence not difficult to understand is suffered by an airman, sometimes, after he has been the victim of a serious fall, and in similar circumstances a jockey, or say a racing motorist, may be robbed of nerve and when a pilot does lose judgment, as the outcome of a bad mishap, his wisest course is to cease to fly. With a broken nerve, he is a menace to himself and to others as well.—Claude Graham White, in the National Review.

A Homely Thing

An enthusiastic young settlement worker, in her kindness of heart, decided to take to the seashore a little six year old child who had never breathed purer air than that of a city street.

Jennie's delight will do me good, she said to those who expostulated with her. It will help me to rest in my vacation to see her growing rosy. How she will enjoy it!

But it turned out that Jennie was a young woman with views of her own. As the train drew into the station of the seaside resort they could see from the car window a wide stretch of beach and sea.

Look, Jennie, exclaimed her philanthropic companion. There is the ocean!

Bursting into tears, Jennie flung herself, sobbing into the arms of her friend. Oh, my, ain't it homely, she cried.

On the Lion

A Baltimore man, interested in the education of the young, recently visited a kindergarten in that city. After the first exercises the visitor was asked to put a few questions to the pupils. To a boy of 5 the caller said:

Have you ever seen a lion's skin? Yes, sir, came in ringing tones from the youngster.

And where? asked the visitor, impressed with the child's earnestness. On the lion, answered the boy.

TIMELY AID

Western Recognition of the Great Work the C.P.R. is Doing for Canada

The confirmation by Sir Thomas Shaughnessy of the intention of the C.P.R. to expend $100,000,000 in the extension of its lines and perfection of its system in the west, comes at the present time as a piece of very welcome news indeed and furnishes moreover, ample opportunity for the people of Canada to review the situation and examine into the relations which subsist between the Dominion of Canada and this great corporation. When the evidences of a world wide trade depression which is now coming on are to be seen on all sides and the money situation is becoming all the while tighter, the announcement of a gigantic expenditure of this kind, and at this particular time appears like a veritable rift in the clouds before the storm has had time to break.

We have all heard the C.P.R. damned for one thing and another and many of us may have done a bit of it ourselves at times when we didn't happen to think that things were coming sufficiently our way; but nevertheless where is there another corporation that has so thoroughly identified itself with the interests of a country as this mammoth railway and steamboat company has done? Neither is this the first instance when British Columbians in various districts and at various times have seen infant industries nursed along by the company in a way that was truly paternal, and it does not detract from the situation in the slightest where it may be seen that in doing so they were merely building up profitable business for themselves in the years to follow. It is now twenty years since they placed a steamer on Okanagan Lake that was far beyond the capacity required at that time, and many a lean trip was made before there was business enough to justify the expenditure. Any settler on the shore of Okanagan Lake had only to moor a log or two at the shore to serve as a wharf and display a white flag when he wanted the boat to call, and he and his little bit of produce or belonging was taken aboard. The mining industry in the Boundary was fostered along the same way, and when it was a matter of life or death to mine owners to determine whether the low grade ores of the Boundary could be made to yield a profit, the C.P.R. did their part to help out the situation by giving a rate of 35 cents per ton for the transportation of ore to the smelters at Greenwood, Grand Forks and Boundary Falls long before there was any other road to share this business with them.

In fact, Sir John A. Macdonald, far-seeing statesman as he was, builded even better than he knew when he tied up with the men who risked their fortunes in the gigantic scheme of giving Canada a railway from ocean to ocean; and any aid which he and his parliament were able to give at critical periods to help it through, was bread sown on the waters, which is since coming back in countless ways and this latest manifestation in the expenditure of $100,000 in the extension and improvement of their system in the west at this particular time is but another magnificent instance of the policy they have seen fit to pursue and the national sentiment which has inspired it. To do the right thing at the right time is a happy faculty that is unfortunately not possessed by all, and neither are all in a position to do it, but it is fortunate for all that those who are in a position to do so, have the will to do so.—Hedley, B.C. Gazette.

They were in the antique section of the art museum and were gazing at a mummy swathed in its cloth. Auto or aeroplane accident, evidently, one man remarked. Guess it's the former returned his companion, for see, there is his number, and he pointed to a card reading 'B.C. 87.'

Caring for Caged Birds

Vegetable food of some kind is a necessity for the caged bird. A lettuce leaf, water cress, a small piece of apple, a grape or a small thin piece of raw potato if there is nothing else should be given every day. The staple food should be canary seed mixed with a small percentage of rape and golden millet, but occasionally, in cold weather add a little hem seed.

Should the bird's nails grow too long, take him in your hand, loosely, but firmly, hold his feet in a cup of warm, soapy water for several minutes to soften the nail, then cut the extreme end with a pair of sharp nail scissors.

A bird should be accustomed to having a bath every morning. The best best plan to encourage this is to remove the bottom of the cage, put a small dish of water on a sheet of paper, and set the top of the cage over it. Many birds have to be coaxed into taking a bath, and if your bird has not been accustomed to it, it will help matters to remove the seed and water dishes. After he has bathed hang the cage in a warm place so that there may be no fear of the bird becoming chilled.

Gentlemen,—In June, 98, I had my hand and wrist bitten and badly mangled by a vicious horse. I suffered greatly for several days and the tooth cuts refused to heal until your agent gave me a bottle of MINARD'S LINIMENT, which I began using. The effect was magical; in five hours the pain had ceased and in two weeks the wounds had completely healed and my hand and arm were as well as ever.

Lord Ballyrot in Shangland

Having finished my repast in a public dining room you know, I arose and requested of the waiter that he regain my hat and my walking stick. The fellow summoned a boy in uniform and addressed him like this:

Hey kid, this gent wants his lid and his lumber. Go over to the coat-tree and shake off the fruit until you come across a gasstove toque and a yellow waggon-mast. Don't worry, Mister. The kid'll fetch your freak kelly and your groper.

My word!

Neuralgic Condition Of the Nerves

In this age of nervous disorders neuralgia is fearfully common. The first thought is of neuralgia in the head or splitting headache, but neuralgia may affect any part of the body in which there are sensitive nerves.

The teeth are often blamed and extracted in error, when the cause of the trouble is in the impoverished condition of the blood and the starved nervous system.

While neuralgic pains are usually sharp and shooting, and consequently difficult to locate, the seat of trouble is usually sore and tender under pressure.

Neuralgia is pain and as such is the symptom of a disease—nervous exhaustion. The nerves must be restored before cure can possibly be effected.

In many cases neuralgia is easily curable by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. The patient is thin and bloodless and needs tonic treatment to form new, rich blood.

The application of cloths rung from hot water will afford relief from the suffering, and the regular use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food for a few weeks will completely overcome the neuralgic condition.

Powerful drugs are to be avoided, because of their injurious effect in further weakening the nervous system. The Nerve Food cures by building up the feeble, wasted nerve cells, and for this reason is of lasting benefit.
